White and Gray Animals Are Spe cially Prized, and a Big White Mare Mule Is a Combination That Draws the Premium From Buyers.

Western mule raisers are looking to ward Kansas City as a great market. Western mules have made such a record for themselves in South Africa that the English government has ordered buyers to come to Kansas City and lay in another supply. Major Scobell, who is now at New Orleans, with Captain S. M. Smith will be in Kansas City, December 1, to buy 3,000 more mules, and local dealers are negotiating for the stock to supply the demand. It is announced that the next shipment of mules will complete the re-quirements of the African campaign.

It was stated by a dealer yesterday that Kansa. City had furnished more mules to the different armies of the world than any other place, and when the order soon to be one that they can rely on to lead them right. White mules are more courageous than dark ones and they can stand more hardships. White mules can go longer without food or water than their brunette fellows. Why this is so I don't know, unless white mules represent a strain of blood that is superior to others, just as the Anglo-Saxon is superior to the dark skinned natives of the tropics. If you put a bell on a big white Missouri mule his fellow kind any place in the world will follow him without a protest.

Females in Demand.

"Another thing that strikes the average person as curious is that we demand as many mare mules for export as we can get. the more the better. They can undergo greater hardships in the tropics than a male, and, so far as health goes, she can live and work where a male will lie down and die. They are bringing a premium in this market just now, and it is because of the foreign demand for that sex. She will assert her individuality and exercise her temper just as much in and exercise her temper just as much in the wilds of a foreign land as she does in her quiet Missouri pasture. The acme of all that could be asked for in the entire family is a big, white mare mule. That is a combination hard to beat. A close study of the mule reveals some interesting knowledge, acquired in some cases at considerable hazard. But when one learns to understand a mule he will find the infortunate hybrid to process. the unfortunate hybrid to possess many excellent qualities. The present demand for mules for war service has added an increased dignity to the species. I have the atest respect for the mule on general

Mrs. M. J. Carpenter and her daughter called upon Humane Officer Greenman yesterday afternon to get him to assist filled is taken into consideration it gives her in finding her son, G. W. Carpenter, Kansas City a wide margin. 37 years old.

To a reporter for The Journal Mrs. Car A peculiar feature of the mule purchases for service in the South African campaign is the fact the buyers insist on securing as many white or gray animals as possible. This is not because the Boer women are inclined toward auburn locks, but on account of the additional value placed upon light colored mules in making up pack trains and also because white mules are ment.

To a reporter for The Journal Mrs. Carpenter said that her son had been alling for several weeks and that her he began to grow Medical school, at Eighteenth and Woodland. Last Saturdhy he began to grow worse and Dr. Watson was summoned. He administered some medicines and advised that the sick man be removed to the city hospital where he would get better treatment.

that the sick man be removed to the city trains and also because white mules are what might be termed "stronger minded" than their feilows.

A representative of a foreign government who is in the city told a reporter for The Journal some interesting things about mules yesterday, in which the color of the animals was dwelt upon. He said:

"People are inclined to laugh when we say that we want only white or gray mules for war service, but it is a fact, nevertheless. In transporting ammunition and supplies to the front the English government uses mule pack trains. Very often this packing is done at night, and it is a well known fact that white mules will follow each other better than darker colored ones.

"In traveling over mountains we never hitch mules together, but allow them to follow one another, which they will do provided they have a natural born leader at the head of the procession. By a natural born leader i mean a 'strong minded' one that they can rely on to lead them right. White mules are more courageous than dark ones and they can stand more hardships. At Stewart's it was learned that a call had been received for the ambulance to call at the pesthouse on the river and take a body to Union cemetery. This was the body of Carpenter. It was turther learned that several doctors had been consulted on the case and while some claimed that the patient had uraemic poisoning caused by some kidney affection, others said that it was a constitutional disease. Other doctors, however, thought it was smallpox and it was for this reason, no doubt, that the sick man was sent to the pesthouse. Mrs. Carpenter also said that someone purporting to be a physician called at the Browt's house and said that he wanted to vaccinate all the members of the family as Carpenter had had smallpox.

SAYS MANY NICE THINGS.

inperintendent Shenkley Talks of the Recent Visit of Des Moines Teachers to Local Schools.

That the recent visit of the Des Moin instructive is apparent from the many nice things which Superintendent Sheakley is quoted as saying in the Des Moines Register. Following is his interview:

quoted as saying in the Des Moines Register. Following is his interview:

"We were more than satisfied with our trip to the Kanass City schools," said Superintendent Sheakley, of the West Des Moines district, yesterday. Superintendent Sheakley and most of the party returned Sunday morning. Will Harbach, member of the board, went on to Denver, and will not be back for a day or two. "The experience of visiting the schools of another city and the investigations we were enabled to make," continued the Des Moines superintendent, "were well worth the time and money expended. There were about thirty-five teachers in the party, and every one of them gained helpful ideas, I believe."

"What was the most striking feature of the Kansas City system?"

"The feature that impressed me most was the union of the public library and the public schools. One of the finest buildings in the city is occupied by the city library. On the second floor is a fine art exhibit. The board of education has rooms in the building, and, in fact has charge of the library. In this way the schools and the library work together. The library uses the school buildings for substations, and send books out to the schools as they may be needed. It is a feature that is most helpful to the schools.

"Another thing that struck the Des Moines teachers as being a fine institution is the manual training, domestic economy, as sewing, cooking, managing a house, etc., drawing and all of the studies of this class are taught there. Of course most of the ordinary literary and selentific branches are also taught there, everything but Greek being included in the curriculum.

This is taught at the Central High school, where there are 1,600 pupils. The drawing and art work in the schools and visited a large number of them. The grade teachers visited the grades in which they are teaching, and so gained deas along the lines they are most interested in. The Kansas City system as a whole is very successful in my opinion, and the good gained by the visit was considerable. Ther

In the bustling throng at the Union depot yesterday there was at least one per son happy and contented. Some were hurrsing to and fro in the excitement of leavtaking attending to this and that detail:
others were escorted from the incoming trains by welcoming friends; still others were impatiently awaiting the time when they could continue their separate journeys. Amid all this one old woman sat oblivious of her surroundings calmiy smoking an old clay pipe. A plain calico gown was her attire, topped off with an old sunbonnet, which she had pushed back from a wrinkled and weather beaten face. Her elbows rested on her knees with the bony fingers of one yellow hand supporting the bowl of the pipe.

Thus she sat, gazing into the distance and blowing curls of blue smoke ceilingward. Whether she was musing upon the philosophy of life, or only dreaming of forgotten days when, young and beautiful, she was besieged by admirers, was not apparent until, turning to a man of middle age at her side, who was evidently her son, she said:

AN EIGHT YEAR COURSE

GRADED SCHOOLS DO NOT PREPARE FOR THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Principal White Declares That the Children Enter the High School Too Vonng-Western Rush Cause of the Trouble.

"The graded school course should b eight years in length instead of seven." said Principal White, of the Central high school, yesterday. "Children come here too young altogether, before they are capable of understanding fully what we are doing here. In this eighth year pupils could make beginnings of simpler high school work, such as elementary algebra, physiology and civil government; then there would not be such a jump from grade to high school. Parents come to me and say, 'You are killing my boy.' I always reply, 'I am doing nothing of the kind. You are kill-ing him yourself. It is you and not we who urged his carrying so many studies." There are three main reasons why students take five studies here. First, they are urged on by their parents; parent come in and say their children must be through school by a certain time, that they cannot possibly send them any longer. Second, pupils find the curriculum so in-viting that they can't bear not to take more than the four branches; and, lastly for various reasons of absence or failure more than the four branches; and, lastly, for various reasons of absence or failure in their first years they are forced to carry more studies at the end in order to graduate in four years.

"The teachers are united in discouraging pupils from taking five studies, and rules are being made whereby the last class mentioned, those who must take five to get through, shall be prohibited from taking more than four studies."

Mr. Cammack, assistant principal of the school, said that the secret of the trouble was the rush and hurry of Western life. "People in Kansas City." he said. "are hustling all the time, and this spirit has spread from commercial to school life. Everything must be done in a rush." Then, too, Mr. Cammack believes that the physical education of the students is neglected, especially among the girls. He believes it just as much important and even more so that an hour should be set aside daily for physical training and development among the "Students as for any other studies.

"At present nothing of the kind is to be found," said Mr. Cammack. "There is no physical supervision whatever. We have read of the threefold development of man.

physical supervision whatever. We have read of the threefold development of man 'moral, mental and physical,' for years and given an intellectual consent for the truth of it, but we do not grasp the mean-ing of the words enough to see their neces-sary and logical outcome, namely, scientific physical development in the schools."

How it Works.

The kindergarien teacher met her friend, the seventh grade teacher, in the hall and, surprised by the pale, frightened face of the latter, asked, hurriedly: "Are you III? Has anything happened?"

"It is too dreadful." the seventh grade teacher answered. "The largest boy in my room had his feet in the aisle and in passing I stumbled over them and pushed against him to save myself from falling. He swore at me so victously that I am sure he means to report me to the board for administering corporal punishment to him during school hours, without the consent of his parents, without due notice, without teachers as witnesses and in the presence of the school. I'm sure to be convicted on one of the five counts and dismissed. Then I'll have to marry, after all.

He Is Not a "Snitcher."

In the course of a tross-examination by Frank Walsh in a damage suit in Judge Gates' court yesterday, J. C. Chastine, the well known colored politician, indignantly denied that he was a "anitcher." Chastine testified that he was connected with "the legal department" of a certain law firm in the city. "What do you mean by being connected with the legal department" asked Mr. Walsh.
"I mean I'm a lawyer of good standing, just the same's the rest of you."
"Oh, yes; you mean that you rustle among the colored people for suits against the Metropolitan—is that it." Well, if I find any that want to bring a suit, take 'em to that firm."

"Aha. That's what they call a 'snitcher,' isn't "A 'snitcher'? No, sir' I ain't no snitcher. I'm a lawyer-I'm a lawyer of good standing. 'Snitcher'.' Huh! I should say not!"

This $25,000 stock of Groceries, only slightly damaged by water, must be sold in order to make room for the carpenters, who are now at work on the upper floors of our buildings. The prices we are making ought to sell every dollar's worth of this stock in ten days, and if the eager buvers keep coming as they have in the past few days the damaged stock will be cleaned up by Saturday night. Remember, you can buy goods here in this sale for 25c on the dollar less than any house in Kansas City.

Diamonds.

Diamonds at the old figures we mean it. Although prices have advanced fully 50 per cent, it cuts no figure here.

No matter how much the raise, as we are not speculators, but are business people, we turn all our stock over as fast as we can, and sell at just enough to make a living profit. Others figure differently. They have to pay more for diamonds, through either their lack of foresight in buying ahead, or through their financial inability to handle large deals, and so they charge a big price to the consumer. To prove how small diamond prices are here-We will sell | karat, pure white Solitaire Ring, one that can't be duplicated elsewhere for less $30 to-day only will be......
